

COMMUNICATOR

As Marines, we don't just meet standards. We exceed them. In July, I challenged each of you to put your focus beyond getting yourself ready; I challenged you to look at three ways you can help every Marine in your unit be ready to "fight tonight."

Personal Readiness

- Ensuring every Marine is physically, mentally, financially, family and administratively ready. This includes being PME complete, MOS proficient, current on medical and dental requirements and having a current passport and GTCC.

Training Currency

- Reaching T&R benchmarks through scheduled drills, annual training, exercises and deployments.

Equipment Inventory and Inspection

- A collective effort to ensure each Marine has the gear needed and equipment is accounted for and maintained.

The Marine Corps Reserve exists for one reason: to be ready to "clear the bench" and augment the Total Force. We have been going above and beyond accomplishing this mission for more than 100 years. You know what you must do to be ready. Go do it. Semper Fidelis.

RESERVE READINESS SERIES

PART
5 OF 5

This is the final issue addressing what it means to be “Ready.”
This month’s issue will focus on:

Readiness For Mobilization

BOTTOM LINE

Mobilization readiness is achieved using the pillars developed: Personal, Equipment and Training Readiness. Combined are the methods used to prepare units to mobilize, deploy and execute the assigned mission.
